continued with the team's car competing in four more events and finishing fourth in the USRRC's GT3 driver's championship. It was during this season that Spencer personally began building the engines for the car and has since only had one engine related problem. The 2000 season saw the appearance of the Porsche GT3-R, a car that instantly rendered the Spencer Pumpelly Racing team's car obsolete, but despite the disadvantage the team pressed on. The 2000 Rolex 24 was Spencer's third start in the race. On the first lap the car lost top gear but the car continued to race towards 26th overall and 12th in class marking Spencer's 3rd finish in as many tries. The team, with co-driver Emil Assentato, competed in three more events. A best ever 6th overall qualifying position at Lime Rock and a strong top five at Mid Ohio capped great season for a team with an old car. Spencer also began instructing for the Skip Barber Racing School in 2000.

During the 2001 season Spencer joined co-driver Steve Ivankovich to form Zip-Pumpelly racing, and campaigned the entire Grand Am season in a Porsche GT3-R. The team, led by crew chief Paul Chabris, finished 15th overall and 9th in the tough GT class in the 2001 Rolex marking the best ever finish for the team by more than 11 places, as well as Spencer's fourth finish in four attempts. Spencer also raced in the Skip Barber R/T 2000 cars at Sebring in early January taking both poles and both race wins. Look for Spencer to have his best season yet in 2001.
